

hulo

Artist | Painter | June 10

Victoria Wagner

"On the one hand, visual order provides a place for the senses to rest, while color relationships create problems for the brain to solve. I like this simultaneity."

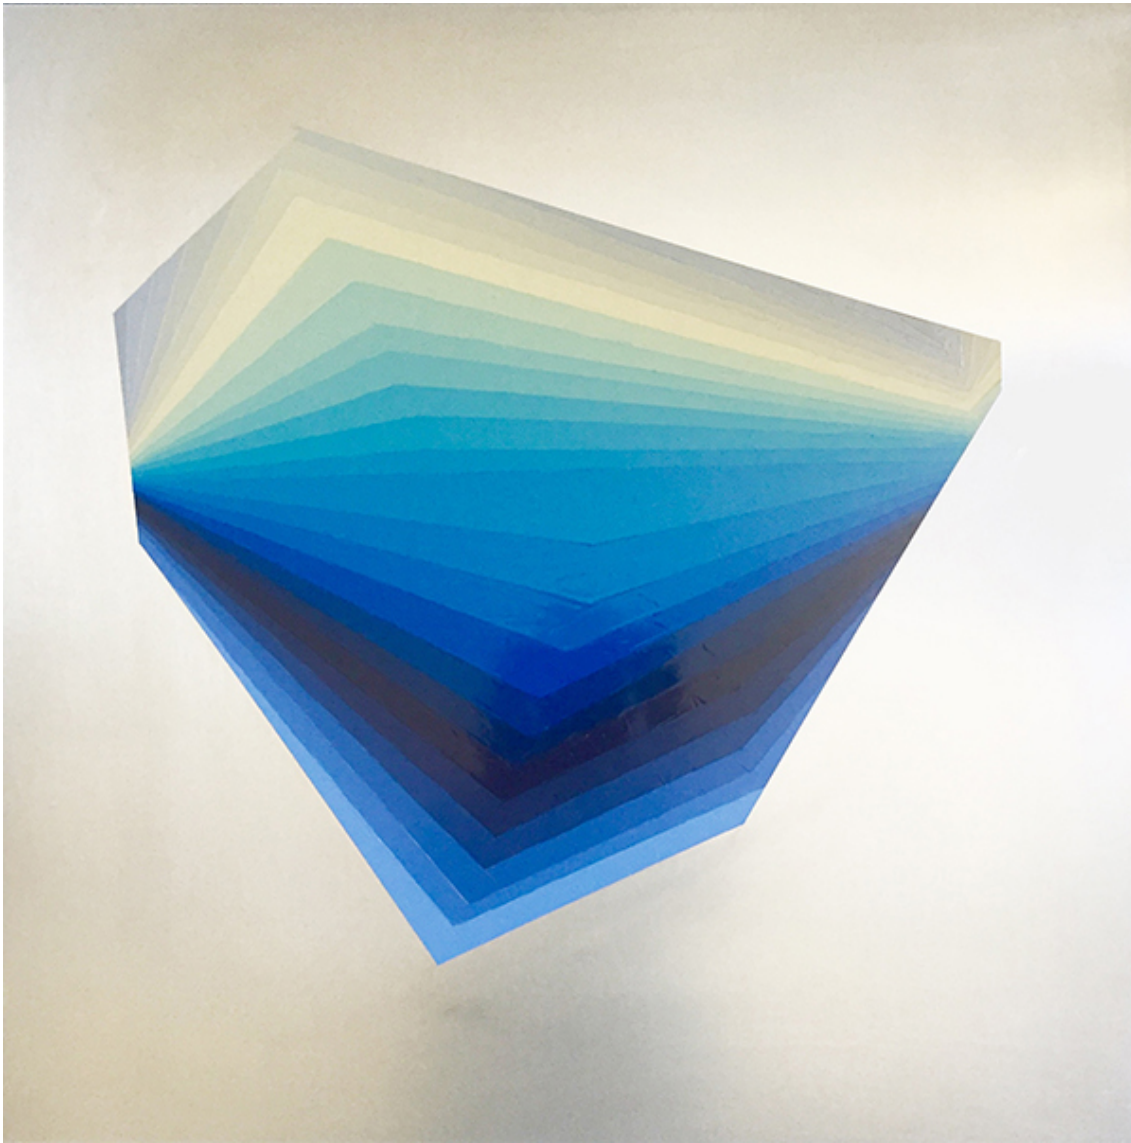

It is always exciting to introduce an artist local to the community, whose art speaks to the natural surroundings we live in.

Victoria Wagner, is an artist and adjunct professor at California College of Arts, who lives in Occidental, CA.

Victoria's work explores painting and sculpture in various materials. She moves between standard oil on canvas, to painting on aluminum and salvaged pieces of wood in unique color palettes using oil, gouache and acrylic.

"My work deals with observation and mystery. I am fascinated with unlikely material pairings, Within the familiar arc of a line, a simple form, the pleasant cadence of common geometric shape.."

Beginning June 10th, we will be showing a new series of her paintings on aluminum, alongside smaller sculptures in wood and ceramic.

An example from the collection shown on June 10th. Victoria paints in gouache, oils and acrylics on aluminum boards, which serves as a reflective background to the spectral colors.

Victoria with an example of a wood, deliberately left with the marks of life, from either termites, rot or bees, alongside her painted geometric lines.
